WASHINGTON (A.P.) - Secretary of State Alexander Haig is expected to visit at least three other countries after attending a foreign ministers meeting of the European security conference in Spain next Monday, official sources said Wednesday.

Portugal, Morocco and Romania have been added to Mr. Haig's schedule after his visit to Madrid, where the 35 signatories to the Helsinki agreement will discuss the martial law crackdown

The officials said Mr. Haig may visit other countries as well but that no final decisions have been reached.

Qadhafi may go to Tunisia again

TUNIS (R) — Libyan leader Muammar Qadhafi may visit Tunisia again this year to meet President Habib Bourguiba and "clear the air" in the two countries' strained relations, the Tunisian weekly Dialogue said. The weekly, published by the ruling Destourian Socialist Party, said Col. Qadhafi's unexpected visit to Tunisia last month, while President Bourguiba was in the United States for a medical check up. had paved the way for another visit by the Libyan leader.

Gulf 'maintains link' to Eastern Europe

ABU DHABI (R) — Gulf countries are maintaining a dialogue with Eastern Europe directly and through embassies in Kuwait, Secretary-General of the Gulf Cooperation Council Abdulla Bishara was quoted as saying Wednesday. Only Kuwait of the six-nation council has diplomatic relations with the Eastern bloc. The Abu Dhabi-based pape: Al Ittihad quoted Mr. Bishara as saying: "It is true there are no embassies but that will not affect the dialogue:" Mr. Bishara told questioners after he made a speech to the tourist club here: "Embassies are not important to make contact with these countries. Embassies are a tradition of the Victorian

Iraqi forces 'kill 24 Iranians'

BEIRUT (R) - Iraqi forces killed 24 Iranians in fighting in various sectors of the Gulf war during the last 24 hours, the Iraqi News Agency said. It quoted a military communique as saying that Iraq lost one killed. The agency denied a Tehran radio report which said Iranian troops had shot down an lraqi jet fighter near the southern city of Dezful Tuesday.

Bush ambush 'an accident'

WASHINGTON (R) - Federal agents are now 99 per cent certain that an incident Tuesday in which Vice President George Bush's limousine was hit by a flying object was an accident, not an assassination attempt. Washington's security services, still jittery from the attempt on President Reagan's life last March, mounted a massive operation when the car carrying Mr. Bush was hit by the still unidentified missile about a mile from the White House. Security agencies said Tuesday night the investigation was still open but the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) had ruled out the use of any sort of gun and they were "99 per cent sure" the incident was accidental.

Dutch suspend: aid to Turkey

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (A.P.) — The Dutch government has shelved new programmes for economic and military aid to NATO ally Turkey following the overthrow of democratic rule in the country, the foreign ministry said Wednesday.

Foreign Minister Max Van der Stoel outlined the measure Tuesday in a letter answering questions from parliament. He told legislators that existing aid contracts were completed and "no new ones have been considered in view of the domestic situation in Turkey," a ministry spokesman said.

"Without setting deadlines, I personally believe the time has come to get on with the task before us, and the sooner the better." Mr. Reagan said in an official arrival ceremony in the White House East Room for Mr. Mubarak.

He told Mr. Mubarak his visit is testimony that the good relations between the United States and Egypt are "more than a compact between individuals. It's a commitment between nations."

Mr. Mubarak arrived Tuesday for a four-day official visit to Washington, his first since becoming president following the assassination of President Anwar Sadat on Oct. 6.

The "key to peace." said Mr. Mubarak, is to solve the "Palestinian problem... based on mutual recognition and acceptance." "The Palestinians need your help and your understanding," Mr. Mubarak told Mr. Reagan. He said the goal of selfdetermination for the Palestinians 'cannot be denied" and also offers Israel's best hope for peace in the Middle East.

A heavy rain forced the ceremony indoors, where Mr. Reagan greeted Mr. Mubarak warmly. The president said "your visit reaffirms our friendship and all Americans thank you for that reaffirmation."

Regarding the Camp David accords, signed by Israel, Egypt and the United States in 1979, Mr. Reagan noted that the question of Palestinian "autonomy" will be the remaining unfinished business from the accords following the withdrawal of Israel from the Egyptian Sinai in April.

In the spirit of understanding. we must address the remaining issues in the negotiations for autonomy on the West Bank and Gaza and chart a course that will build on that which has already been done," Mr. Reagan said in voicing his support for the process started by his predecessor. Jimmy

"In the months ahead, we must maintain our flexibility, yet never lose sight of the goal of establishing a lasting and comprehensive peace that will provide security and justice and a better life for all of the people in the Middle East," Mr. Reagan said.

By citing the need for tlexibility. Mr. Reagan seemed to be holding open the possibility of another approach to resolving the Palestinian dispute.

It was Mr. Reagan's most detailed statement as president on Camp David and the search for a Middle East peace. That he met with Mr. Mubarak at this time was no coincidence since the administration is worried that the Camp David process might wane following the return of the Sinai to

Modernation comes to Jordan's bedouins

By Earleen F. Tatro Associated Press

WHEN HAMED HAMD was a boy, his bedouin family roamed the length of the narrow valley between soaring canyon walls and pitched their goat-hair tents wherever they found water for their flocks. Today, half a century later, Mr. Hamd still lives in a goat-hair tent and wears the flowing robes and checkered headcloth of the desert nomads. But the water is piped in by the Jordanian government, fodder for his goats arrives in big burlap bags abroad a relative's pickup truck and his own staples are tins of imported sardines, processed meats and powdered milk. The bedouin Arab, romantic figure of cinema and fiction, has entered the 20th century and is rapidly being absorbed into the Jordanian army and other wagepaying jobs.

The Jordanian government estimates there are about 40,000 bedouins -- fewer than 2 per cent of the country's population of 2.3 million -- still living in tents and raising goats and camels. In 1941, the nomadic bedouin population in the kingdom was estimated at

"I want the boy to go outside the valley to study and to have a very good life," the old man said.

Asked whether the old ways or the new ways were better, Mr. Hamd replied: "life now is better. Before, life depended on God's mercy, on when the rains came. Today, praise God, the water comes to us in the pipes."

U. of J. president off to U.S. for panel meet, university tour

AMMAN (Petra) — University of Jordan President Abdul Salam Al Majali left for New York Wednesday to participate in the meetings of a subcommittee set up by a U.N. committee for the employment of science and technology in development. The subcommittee started its meetings Wednesday, and they will continue through Feb. 15.

Dr. Majali, who is a committee member, will later lead a delegation representing the new Mu'ta University on a tour of American universities, to look into their educational systems and study the possibility of benefiting from them in working out Mu'ta University's statutes and regulations.

IDB board approves 13 loans for industrial enterprises

AMMAN (Petra) - The board of directors of the Industrial Development Bank agreed at its last meeting to give 13 loans totalling JD 1.53 million. Of this, five loans totalling JD 155,000 will go to finance the establishment of new industrial projects to produce biscuits, ice blocks, a restaurant for oriental and western pastries and a semiautomatic bakery.

The board agreed to give five loans, totalling ID 1.2 million, to finance the expansion and modernisation of plants producing ready-made fodder, manufactured juice, canned foodstuffs, and plastic tubing for electric wires; and a plant for the Arab Pharmaceutical Manufacturing Company. Three loans totalling JD 265,000 will help to establish plants for ready-made clothes, fodder and refrigerators.

During the first year of production, the projects will add some JD 3.262 million to the national income, and will provide 265 new employment opportunities.

Sharif back from Mecca mosque council session

AMMAN (Petra) — Minister of Awqaf and Islamic Affairs Kamel Al Sharif returned to Amman on Wednesday after attending the seventh meeting of the higher international council for mosques. which was held in Mecca.

Mr. Sharif said that during the week-long meeting, the council discussed a number of subjects on its agenda and decided, among other things, to build relief centres and mosques for Afghan and Somali refugees in their camps. Jordan's delegation to the meeting submitted to the council a report on the condition of mosques and Islamic religious and archaeological sites in occupied Palestine, and requested that Muslim nations contribute towards the reconstruction and restoration of these places with a view to foiling Israeli plans to confiscate them.

The council, Mr. Sharif said, also decided to send delegations to contact Islamic communities around the world to explain Islamic issues and call for solidarity among world Muslims.

Asfour off for Tunis meeting; set for Islamabad conference left Amman on Wednesday at the head of a delegation to take part in the meetings of the Arab Economic and Social Council, due to begin in Tunis on Feb. 6.

The council will discuss the Arab labour movement, and the establishment of an information: bank on skilled Arab workers who live abroad, particularly in Europe, and how to benefit from them in the implementation of projects financed by Arab funds, as well as. food security projects.

During his three-day stay in Tunis, Mr. Astour will discuss with the Tunisian side in the joint' Jordanian-Tunisian committee means of increasing the volume of trade between Jordan and Tunisia, and will sign a bilateral trade

It was announced Wednesday that Mr. Asfour will also lead Jordan's delegation to a round-table ministerial meeting, to be held in Islamabad from Feb. 14-17, on industrial cooperation among Islamic states. The meeting is taking place in implementation of a resolution of an Organisation of the Islamic Conference meeting in Jeddah last year.

Anani ends Gulf tour

AMMAN (Petra) - Minister of Labour Jawad Al Anani returned to Amman Wednesday at the end of a tour of the Gulf region which took him to Bahrain, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates (UAE) and

During his two-week tour, Dr. Anani held talks with officials on cooperation between the four countries and Jordan in vocational training and labour safety affairs. Agreement in principle was reached between Jordan and the UAE on these labour-related matters, and a copy of the draft agreement was submitted as well to Qatar and Oman, the minister said.

Dr. Anani said his talks in the Gulf also dealt with that region's assistance in establishing a specialised labour safety institute in Jordan, and financing the purchase of its equipment.

During his tour, Dr. Anani was received by Sultan Qaboos of Oman, the emirs of Bahrain and Oatar and the Abu Dhabi heir apparent, as well as the rulers of Ras Al Khaimah and Ajaman.

Dr. Anani also met with members of the Jordanian community living in the Gulf, and discussed with them their work conditions.

Committee says should be put off

AMMAN (J.T.) — Minister of Industry and Trade Walid Assour has referred to the cabinet the report of a committee which studied the question of an agricultural census for the year 1982, Al Ra'i newspaper reported on Wednesday. The committee, comprising experts from the Ministry of Agriculture, the Statistics Department, the National Planning Council and the Budget Department, recommended that the census be postponed until next year. United Nations experts have advised that agricultural census work cannot be done satisfactorily during dry years, because this could affect answers to questionnaires and render them useless for future planning purposes.

Words vs. deeds

THE DIFFERENCE between talk and action was well demonstrated two days ago, when the American government announced it was appointing a special envoy to the Palestinian "autonomy" talks between Egypt and Israel, while the Israeli government announced plans to build 16 new military settlements in the occupied West Bank. The military settlements would later be transformed into civilian villages, according to the plans of the Jewish Agency.

The contrast between these two acts is telling, and sorry. The United States feels that by appointing Mr. Richard Fairbanks as its envoy to the Camp David autonomy talks, it is "pushing the peace process forward". We prefer to see it as flogging a dead horse -as does most of the rest of the world, including those West European allies of the United States whose opinion is so valued in Washington on Polish matters, but is ignored on the Middle East.

The American government surely cannot fail to see that while it appoints a special envoy for the autonomy talks, its financing of the Israeli government's annual budget is allowing the Israelis to establish more and more settlements that are negating any possibility of meaningful Palestinian selfdetermination in those areas? Does not one American hand see what the other hand is doing? Or are we all supposed to ignore the contradictions, and turn off our rationality as well as the pulsating little cells in the mind that differentiate between what is principled and what is ludicrous?

Iraqi-Iranian war. Israel has supplied Tehran with $450 million

The Tehran-Tel Aviv cooperation has become a strategic alliance against Iraq, the states of the Arabian Gulf and the Arab Nation. Israel has planned for this alliance in which Iran joined because of its historical rancour towards the Arabs and in order to impose Iranian hegemony on the Arabian Gulf region. After succeeding in isolating Egypt from the Arab fold, Israel realised that Iraq would be the alternative to Egypt's military and political strength. Thus Israel is exploiting the Iraqi-Iranian war in order to weaken Iraq's military strength by supplying military aid, hardware, weapons and experts to Iran whose forces are on the brink of total collapse. Israel is doing this in order to pave the way for isolating Iraq from the Arab states and then to force it out of the Arab-Israeli conflict. Sharon as well as the chief of Mossad deciared that one of Israel's four strategic goals was to keep Iraq away from the western front. This proves that the Israeli enemy understands the weight of Iraq's participation in the Arabs' confrontation of Israel. Therefore, the Israeli and the Iranian joint

Jaffa reduced to seedy slum

By Daniel Grebler

TEL AVIV (A.P.) — Simmering at Tel Aviv's southern fringe is Jaffa, once the gateway to the Holy Land but now a slum that is worrying many Israelis with its shift toward Arab Nationalism and Islamic fervour.

Jaffa Arabs were once considered among Israel's most docile Arab communities. But today, "Arab Jaffa is like a barrel of dynamite that could explode any minute," warns Ahmad Kabub, chairman of Jaffa's Muslim religious fund the Waqf.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin's adviser for Arab affairs, Binaymin Gur-Arye, denies Israeli press reports of growing Arab extremism in Jaffa, calling them "exaggerated and untruthful."

But Sheikh Bassam Abu Zaved. Jaffa's chief Muslim religious figure, has been quoted as calling Jaffa "Our Palestine" during fiery sermons. His followers crowd the Ajami Quarter, a slutt of tincovered huts and ramshackle buildings slated for demolition by the municipality. Ajami activists have influenced local shopkeepers and restaurants to stop selling alcohol. The activists also chastise Arab girls whom they consider immodestly dressed.

Jaffa is dotted with boarded-up buildings and dilapidated houses. The famous clock tower in the town square still bears the marks of bullets fired 34 years ago.

Tourists and Israelis who visit the opulent complex of artists' galleries and cafes in reconstructed Crusader ruins near the old port take care not to wander into the dark side streets.

"I'm afraid that one day they'll have to surround this whole town with troops - not to guard us, but to protect the rest of the country from us," sayd Mr. Kabub.

Jaffa was once the port town through which Jewish immigrants and Christian pilgrims entered the Holy Land.

The 3,600-year-old port went through a tumultuous history under Romans, Crusaders, Napoleon and the Turks.

But in 1909, Jewish immigrants founded Tel Aviv, and the fastgrowing metropolis was destined to eclipse Jaffa in just 40 years. Today the once-bustling harbour is used only by fishermen.

During Israel's 1948 independence war, most of Jaffa's 70,000 Arabs were forced out of their town, and a year later it was incorporated into Tel Aviv.

There are no figures for the number of Jews still living in Jaffa. and in what is perhaps another sign of the chaos there, no one knows the exact number of Arabs.

Mr. Kabub claims there are nearly 25,000. A 1979 census put the figure at 13,000. But the state statistics bureau says there are only 9,000, about two-thirds Muslims and the rest mostly Greek Orthodox Christians.

Tel Aviv has 335,000 inhabitants. Israel's population of 3.9 million includes 600,000 Arabs. But while there are five Arabs in parliament, none is from Jaffa. and no Arabs sit on the Tel Aviv-Jaffa municipal council. The Arabs recently decided to form a separate state for the next municipal elections.

Mr. Kabub and other Arab leaders say Jaffa's main problem is an acute housing shortate caused by an official policy of neglect. "In the 1960s, the government started building new housing for the Jews of Jaffa," says Mr. Kabub. "But when the Jews left the older buildings, they were closed up."

Municipal officials blame the national government for Jaffa's lack of funds. Aharon Farber, who heads the municipality's housing agency, says "we will do all we can to solve the hardships of Jaffa's Arabs -- but it will take time."

He denies Arab charges that Tel Aviv is trying to force Jaffa's residents to move out by neglecting Arabs say that 500 housing units would solve the immediate problem, but that only 30 have been built in the past two years.

Three Arab youths recently committed suicide, and the Arabs claim they acted out of despair over ever building a decent life in Jaffa, Whether true or not, the claims indicate the highly emotional tenor of the dispute in the town.

In addition to the housing shortage. Jaffa's public schools are rated the country's poorest, with a dropout rate of over 50 per cent -adding to youth gangs of burglers and street thieves.

What's on in Albania

Anthony Robinson, Financial Times East European correspondent, looks at political developments in Albania since the suicide in December of Prime Minister Mehmet Shehu.

and the 35-year rule of Mr. Enver Hoxha, the ageing Communist Party chief, has been punctuated at irregular intervals by the occasional bloody purge and vit-uperative settling of accounts.

The last major purge was in 1975. Since then the angry divorce from China in 1978 and a bad earthquake one year later have exacerbated the difficulties facing Albania's economy while the country's prickly isolation from the rest of the world has been intensified by the fierce arguments with Belgrade over Yugoslav treatment of its Albanian-speaking minority in the border province of Kosov.

Against this background, the reported suicide in December of Mr. Mehmet Shehu, Prime Minister for 27 years and long Mr. Hoxha's most trusted partner, soon provoked a flurry of speculation about a shoot-out between the two men in which Mr. Hoxha had also died.

To prove that rumours of his death had been somewhat exaggerated, Mr. Hoxha turned up in parliament on Jan. 14 and personally presented 60-year-old Mr. Adil Carcani as the new Prime Minister.

Rounds one and two to Mr. Hoxha. However, the end of the long Hoxha-Shehu partnership and the ill-death of the 73year-old Mr. Hoxha mark the beginning of the end of an era which could open a new and uncertain period in Balkan politics.

On the face of it, the choice of Mr. Carcani represents a confirmation of the traditional Hoxha policies of economic self-reliance at home and dogmatic xenophobia

Indeed, it looks very much like a replay of the situation in 1975 when Albanian politics were deeply affected by the side effects of the power struggle in China bet-ween Mr. Deng Xiaoping and the 'gang of four.'

Mr. Hoxha apparently feared that the emergence of "capitalist roader" Mr. Deng would encourage similar revisionist thinking inside the Albanian leadership. This led to a purge of the top three economic ministers. Mr. Carcani was then chosen to lead a trade

Politics is played tough in Albania delegation to China in place of the three disgraced men in June 1975. at a time when Jiang Qing, Mao's widow, managed to get rid of her own foreign trade minister and temporarily outwit Mr. Deng. Mr. Carcani was apparently chosen because of his association with the faction which preached economic self-sufficiency and opposed any increase in trade with the capitalist West. This tends to confirm that disagreement over future economic and trade policies was at least one of the factors behind Mr. Shehu's suicide and other signs of internecine struggle within the Albanian leadership.

But wider, geopolitical factors are also involved. Yugoslavia in particular has been looking nervously at developments in Albania, mainly because of apprehension about the possible side effects on Belgrade's attempts of pacify nationalist feelings in Albanian-speaking Kosovo.

In a staff diplomatic note to the Albanian ambassador in Belgrade on Dec. 4, Yugoslavia protested about what it called an anti-Yugoslav campaign by Albanian leaders and their calls for the "retum" of "Albanian territories in Yugoslavia" on the basis of what Yugoslavia called "gross falsification." Yugoslavia views the nationalist outbreak in Kosovo as a major potential threat to the integrity of the federal Yugoslav state. It fears that "foreign powers' could well exploit the problems in Kosovo and any future change of regime in Albania to destablise the Balkans.

Yugoslavs believe that the long-term aim of the Soviet Union remains that of securing naval base facilities in the Balkans -especially the former Soviet submarine base at Valona in southern Albania -- and bringing both Albania and Yugoslavia back into the Soviet economic, political and military spheres of influence. Such long-term Soviet hopes were put on ice during the Tito years in Yugoslavia and the Hoxha era in Albania. Over the last two years however, difficulties in selling to the West have seen Yugoslav exports to Comecon rise to 51 per cent of the total, while the Soviet Union has increased its role as suppliers of oil and other key raw materials.

The exodus of Chinese technicians since Albania broke off relations with Peking and the cut-off in Chinese economic assistance, which totalled more than, $900 million between 1961 and 1978, have left Albania meanwhile with unfinished steel plants and other capital projects and an increased need for foreign technology to fill the gaps.

Oil production has also dropped to around 1.5 million tons a year, or 20 per cent below target, since the Chinese left. Heavy investment is required to boost production of chrome, fron ore, nickel and coal which, together with electricity and some agricultural products, provide the bulk of Albanian exports.

The new five year plan, approved by the Party Congress last November, includes ambitious targets for a 56 per cent rise in oil production and a 48 per cent rise in coal output, together with a 29 per cent rise in chrome, 52 per cent rise in copper and 250 per cent rise in iron-nickel output, as well as a 67 per cent rise in rolled steel and a 60 per cent increase in chemicals, mainly fertilisers.

It is doubtful, however, that these targets can be fulfilled without increased imports of plant and machinery. Under the 1977 constitution, whose drafting was carefully supervised by Mr. Hoxha himself, foreign borrowing is forbidden. Without foreign borrowing, imports can only be paid for by higher exports and lower living standards.

This logic led to a 30 per cent rise in exports during the last five year plan, an increased Albanian presence at foreign trade fairs, visits to Albania by French, Greek and Italian Foreign Trade Ministers and a new five year trade agreement with Yugoslavia, signed last autumn, which provides for a doubling of two way trade to around $850 million over the per-

It remains to be seen whether-Mr. Carcani intends to reverse this gradual opening up of the economy or whether political and economic pressures will lead to wider chinks developing in the isolated monolith created by Mr. Hoxha and his friends.

set Ghana right

Quentin Peel, recently in Accra, reports on the daunting economic problems facing Fli Li Jerry Rawlings after his second Ghanian coup.

At the Ashanti goldmine in Ghana, one of the oldest and richest in the world, they are using top quality mahogany as pit props. It is not a sign of wealth, but rather AL RA'l: Our people's support for His Majesty King Hussein's of desperation: more appropriate tumber is simply not available at an initiative is increasing day by day. They are volunteering to fight economic price. side by side with their Iraqi brothers in order to defend Arab

At the Kumasi Brewery, barely an hour away over a crumbling highway, the manufacturers of Star beer are achieving soaring profits at a time when they are operating at only a fraction of capacity. Unable to obtain the spare parts to keep their machinery properly functioning, they are overwhelmed by demand running at three times their supply. Yet they have failed to remit any dividends. or service payments to their foreign shareholders since 1966. Not far beyond Kumasi, in the heart of Ghana's cocoa-growing country, the manager of a Govemment cocoa-buying station has only a handful of bags to show in his store, although the cocoa price was recently tripled and it is well into the buying season. The explanation is that he has not had any money to pay the farmers since last September and often no traasport to collect what little cocoa he can find in exchange for the mere promise of payment. All three cases are classic examples of the topsy turvy state of the Ghanian economy -- once the pride of the British colonies in Africa — which on New Year's Eve suffered its fifth military coup in exactly 25 years of independence.

When Fit-Lt Jerry John Rawlings - JJ to his friends and admirers - announced his takeover just two years after he had solemnly handed over control to a democratically-elected government, there was little doubt that he was a reluctant revolutionary. "Perhaps no one is more disappointed than I am at our return," he told journalists. "I had a great deal of faith in the democratic process but my expectations were betraved."

Even if his statement were exaggerated, he can hardly relish the task ahead. He has taken it upon himself to right the wrongs of one of the most tragic economic disaster stories in Africa. It is a thaukless task which few are prepared to believe he will succeed in, and which certainly proved far beyond the capacity of the deposed administration of Dr. Hilla

The causes of Ghana's latest coup - or revolution, as its instigators insist it is -- go to the beart of the political and economic crisis facing the whole of sub-Saharan Africa. They also call into question the tough market-based policies demanded today by the Intemational Monetary Fund in exchange for the loans needed by African countries to survive their current balance of payments' crises.

The immediate causes are not hard to define. In the past three years Ghana's economy has taken leave of reality. Soaring inflation, running at more than 100 percent. has destroyed the living standards of most wage-earners and eroded the real value of the national currency, the cedi, until its black market price was standing at 16 times the official rate of five cedis to the pound. Earnings from cocoa, traditionally the source of some 70 per cent of foreign exchange, have slumped because of a combination of declining production and the falling price on the world markets. The resulting shortage of foreign exchange has meant that Ghana cannot import the spare parts needed to keep its infrastructure and industries functioning.

The problem has been compounded by lack of maintenance. as a result of inefficiencies and mismanagement. What was once an impressive road network is now often impassable for the articulated lorries which are supposed to collect the cocoa crop. The over-valued cedi has in turn created ideal conditions for corruption, smuggling and a roaring black market - the so-called "Kalabule system."

As for corruption, which became a notorious feature of government in Dr. Nkrumah's day and caused his overthrow in 1966. it was equally widespread in the military regime of the 1970s, and permeated the entire economy under Dr. Limann. The granting of import licences was considered form of political patronage, while those with access to goods or supplies at the official prices members of the civil service or the ruling People's National Party (PNP) -- were able to make small fortunes by reselling into the "kal-abule system." "The situation under Dr. Limann was like the latter days of the Weimar Republic in Germany, according to a leading Ghanian economist. "The centre had collapsed. The demoralisation of the public went much deeper even than in Nkrumah's day. Nobody is sorry to see Limann go. But only the fringe groups are left to take Jerry Rawlings claims to represent the ordinary workers, peasants and the rank and file of the military: those whose standard of living has scarcely improved since independence. But although he undoubtedly has popular appeal, his organised support is largely among fringe groups: students, radical soldiers and left-wing trade unionists.

Against a background of widespread apathy, the uncertain support of senior officers in the military, and the mistrust of the technocrats who represent Ghana's managerial resources, he has to tread an extremely difficult path. Yet economic problems, calling for drastic solutions, are crowding in on him.

In the first place, he and his Provisional National Defence Council (PNDC) must decide whether they can stomach the bitter medicine of devaluation and public spending cuts which has been prescribed by the IMF, in return for urgently needed stand-by credit facilities.

Secondly, they must agree on the ideological direction of the revolution, which could cut across the IMF formula for recovery: whether to return to Nkrumahstyle socialism, with further increases in state control of the economy; whether to follow the uncertain dictates of a form of grastroots democracy, based on people's defence committees, which Rawlings himself appears to favour; or whether to attempt a more pragmatic path of attracting private foreign investment, limiting the role of the public sector, and simultaneously attempting to root out corruption. The need for some sort of settlement with the IMF, and thereby with commercial foreign lenders. is critical. Gross foreign reserves are estimated at some $120 million to $125 million, about the size of Ghana's oil debt to Nigeria. But there are also arrears of foreign payments, including trade debt, service payments, and remittances, totalling some $500 mil-

Virtually no letters of credit are currently being issued by commercial banks for imports, because the Bank of Ghana is some $100 million behind in covering existing LCs. Imports could therefore shortly come to a complete

The IMF had offered the Limann government credits totalling $100 million in exchange for a substantial devaluation and tripling of the petrol price. Agreement had already been reached on a 10 per cent cut in public spending - which would only marginally reduce the soaring government budget deficit - and the increase in the cocoa price last September. Dr. Limann had baulked at the IMF's package because of the political implication of further fuelling inflation for urban dwellers. The irony was that the coup he feared came before he had finally Ideologically, Flt-Lt Rawlings is likely to be even more strongly opposed to the package. "There is no politically feasible programme that Jerry Rawlings can carry out and satisfy both his supporters and the IMF," according to one leading financial consultant.

Rawling's previous economic recipe, when he came to power after his first coup in June 1979, was simply to force the market traders -- Ghana's famed market mammies - to sell their goods at lower prices, and when they refused, to raze their market to the ground. The inevitable result was that the time Dr. Limann came to power three months later, the stalls were empty.

On this occasion, he seems to be more cautious about such simplistic recipes. "Rawlings has bought the proposition that he needs managers to run things," was the opinion of one businessman.

One of Rawlings's first announcements was to call for student groups to help move the cocoa crop stuck in remote rural areas. In his first press conference after the coup, he stressed that a comprehensive economic recovery programme was his top priority.

The PNDC has agreed that 50 per cent of the country's essential commodities should be distributed by the commercial trading houses - a recongition of their greater efficiency - rather than the trade unions and other groups favoured by Dr. Limann. The Ashanti gold mine has been given permission to keep 20 per ent of its gold revenues offshore to pay for imports. Initial decisions such as setting a rigid limit on bank withdrawals have been relaxed in the face of private sector protests. Rawlings has also appointed a cabinet which includes a handful of technocrats as well as the more predictable socialists. But their appointment has already been sharply criticised by students and the press (where pro-Rawlings editors have been installed). The technocrats are unanimous in their advice that devaluation is inevitable, although they argue that the supporting package must include enough loans up front, in advance of the move, to keep market shelves supplied. Whether Rawlings can heed such advice is very questionable. Only a handful of technocrats have so far been prepared to offer him help in the face of criticism such as that of the students. One leading banker remarked that "he needs our advice more than ever.

Nevertheless, there are many in the business community, both Ghanians and foreign investors, who are prepared to give the revolution a chance. They recognise that the country's plight is such that Rawlings' passionate if vague idealism could galvanise all sections of the community into act-but it is politically unacceptable."

In spite of the critical foreign exchange position, he has two factors in his favour. His known opposition to corruption and nepotism is popular, and he could force through austerity measures on the back of it. At the same time, Ghana faces its annual lean season in the coming months, when people always expect food shortages in advance of the next harvest.

If Ghana is to recover, however, it requires sustained and generous support from international lenders, including aid donors, and sympathy from the IMF -- all of which is less likely after such a coup than it was before.

The relations between the new regime in Ghana and the IMF will be regarded as a test case in the rest of Africa where many, if not most countries, face to some extent at least the same problems. Ghana's latest political unheavai only underlines the very real difficulty that African states are having in the present climate.

Western countries such as Britain and the U.S. are holding back from any new commitments, although they fear that Ghana might turn to Libya if it is desperate for either oil or cash. Their caution is reflected by most of Ghana's elite. One man widely mentioned as a possible Minister of Finance -none as yet named - said: "I am not the undertaker of Ghana."

Iranian threat worries

By Earleen F. Tatro

MANAMA, Bahrain, (A.P.)-This free-wheeling Island nation, playground of oil Sheikhs and a booming banking centre, has become the focus of security worries for Saudi Arabia and other Arab states facing an increasingly militant Iran.

The arrests here last December of Islamic militants crystallised fears that Iranian activists were finally ready to carry out Avatoliah Ruhollah Khomeini's tirear to export his three-year-old funlamentalist revolution.

When the Bahrain government announced the capture of the 45 Bahrainis and 15 other Arabs, it. said the men had confessed they were trained in Iran to ferment a mass uprising that was to culiminate in the overthrow of the Island's ruler. Sheikh Issa Bin Salman Al Khalifa, and the oroclamation of "The Islamic Republic of Bahrain."

The Iranian-inspired coup attempt lent new uregency to efforts . by the six states on the Gulf's southern rim to band together for mutual protection. In May 1981, eight mouths after the Iran-Iraq war broke out, Saudi Arabia and Bahrain, along with Kuwait, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Oman, formed the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC), billed as a Gulf version of the European Common Market.

Lately, however, GCC talks have turned to security, with the meeting in late January of the members' defence ministers to be followed in February by a gathering of their interior ministers.

"The regime in Iran is exploiting Shi ite Muslims in Bahrain and the Gulf ... and trains them in the carrying of weapons and sends them back to their countries to create chaos and disrupt order," Bahrain's Prime Minister Sheikh Khalifa Bin Salman Al Khalifa, said in an interview published Jan. 23 by the Paris-based Al-

Mustaqbal magazine. "It is imperative that we have : strategic cooperation to confront this danger," the prime minister said ckdown, the Saudis and Bahrainis signed a mutual security pact and called on other Gulf states to join in. Sheikh Khalifa urged all Arab states to impose a trade ban on How far the Arab states of the Gulf will be able to go in responding to the Iranian challenge is unclear.

There are signs of more open support for Iraq's war effort. which Gulf Arab nations have helped finance with between $16 and 30 billion, according to published reports.

The economic clout of the GCO nations is tremendous. They produce about 25 per cent of the non-communist world's oil imports, netting some $150 billion a

At the end of 1981, according to a Kuwait Central Bank report, the financial assets of the GCC partners totalled $86 billion.

Except for supporting Iraq, the GCC may find it difficult to bring its economic muscle to bear on Iran, where stricter controls have cut to a trickle the traditional trade with countries like Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates. Militarily, the GCC states are much weaker. Their defence forces totaling 134,000 or about half of Iran's military, are untested. Of the six GCC nations, Bahrain is the most logical target for Iran's attempt to spread its revolution. Until 1970, Iran claimed insula. One well-placed Bahraini, who wanted to be anonymous, said, "We believe (Iran) cannot make a coup against us, but their plan is going to continue, here or elsewhere."

"They can kill people, take hostages, burn buildings and then Iran is ready to send its warplanes and hovercraft. We don't have a single, thing for defence against that kind of attack."

The U.S. government is readying a rapid deployment force to protect the Gulf States from outside threats. But GCC states are ambivalent about a superpower umbrella - Even Oman, where U.S. forces have been allowed to use facilities.

The cornerstone of the GCC is do-it-yourself neutrality, and officials here have said inviting Americans would only give their enemies ammunition to ferment more

Saudi oil production falls

BAHRAIN (R) — Saudi Arabian oil output last month slipped to just under eight million barrels. daily from the kingdom's 8.5 million ceiling in force since last November, informed oil industry sources in the Gulf said Wednesday.

Saudi oil ministry officials were not available to comment. But the sources said low prices for crude on the open market had made companies reluctant to pump too high a volume.

. Quotes on the free market for Saudi light crude fell Tuesday to a dollar below the official $34 price. The U.S. companies Exxon, Texaco, Standard Oil of California and Mobil that ship the bulk of Saudi oil use the free market to unload surplus volumes.

Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani has said the kingdom plans no formal output cut to assist other exporters hit hard by the present world glut. But he has also said it is prepared to let output drop under the impact of market forces.

Oil analysts said Saudi Arabia undoubtedly faced strong pressure to cut output at a meeting of Gulf oil ministers that ended in Riyadh on Monday.

Market analysts say a Saudi output cut on the scale reported to have occurred last month will probably not do much to ease the plight of the most hard-pressed members of OPEC (the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries).

Industry sources say Algeria, Libya and Iran together probably want to sell at least 1.5 million barrels daily more than they are able to market now. Kuwaiti sales are also down.

The Middle East Economic Survey (MEES), an authoritative Nicosia-based oil newsletter, estimated this week that total OPEC output was down around 20.6 million barrels daily in January, from a peak of 31 million in 1979.

Gulf oil analysts said that with the northern winter almost over demand was unlikely to pick up immediately.

The world glut is threatening OPEC's price structure, which is based on the Saudi reference price

OPEC ministers are not due to meet again until May 20 in Quito.

Ecuador, but some analysts believe the exporter group may have to hold emergency talks before then to adjust downward prices on some crudes.

Official prices are already being eroded by some exporters offering hidden discounts.

London market experts say the British North Sea and Iran are weak links in the world crude oil pricing structure.

Crude from the British Forties field has traded on the free market around $3.25 below the official rate for contract sales of $36.50 a barrel, set by the government's British National Oil Corporation (BNOC).

Industry sources said companies are weighing whether to press BNOC for an official price cut. They think they might get a reduction of up to one dollar, although the BNOC, backed by a tax-hungry treasury, will argue that spot quotes should not dictate long-term contract prices.

A British cut would intensify pressure on OPEC exporters of similar petrol-rich "sweet" crudes, Algeria, Libya and Nigeria.

slightly smaller volume to be delivered through the controversial new pipeline from Siberia.

Mr. Cheysson did not reveal the price agreed with Algeria after two years of haggling. Algeria had led a worldwide bid by gas exporters to force up prices to parity, in terms of heat delivered, with crude oil. The U.S. El Paso company stopped buying Algerian liquefied natural gas (LNG) rather than pay up.

The Middle East Economic Survey (MEES), a well-informed Nicosia-based oil newsletter, said on Monday that it was believed Gaz de France would pay a base price around $4.65 per million British thermal units, against an Algerian demand last year

But MEES said France would pay a global price" of about $5.20, the balance to be made up in grants by the French government to help finance development projects in Algeria.

Mr. Cheysson said the contract between stateowned Gaz de France and the Algerian state Sonatrach Company was linked with agreements for French industrial exports to Algiers totalling 12.5 billion francs ($2.1 billion).

The minister said the pricing agreement represented part of the French Socialist government's new foreign policy to promote exchanges with developing countries. It means that 23 per cent of French gas, or five per cent of total energy needs. will come from Algeria by 1990.

ROME (R) - Severe winter weather in parts of North America. the Soviet Union and Europe has only marginally affected grain crops, the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) reported Tuesday.

The FAO also raised its estimate of world cereal production in 1981 to 1,522 million tonnes. 90 million tonnes more than in

It said in its publication Food Outlook that winter grain in the U.S. had sufficient snow cover and soil moisture to minimise the damage of frost in some of the coldest weather on record.

The cold weather hampered farm activity in West Germany, northern France, Britain and several East European countries but there was little damage to grain croos, it said. No substantial frost damage had been reported from the Soviet Union.

Most of the increase in cereal production last year was accounted for by coarse grains, the FAO said.

World wheat and coarse grain production was revised upward to 1,251 million tonnes, compared with 1.168 million tonnes in 1980. The increase reflected higher production estimates for most regions except Africa and the Soviet

Mr. Schmidt, angered by wellpublicised differences in his coalition government, said last week that he would resign if his Social Democratic Party (SPD) and their Free Democratic (FDP) allies could not agree on an economic initiative.

His surprise decision to ask for a confidence vote was only the second occasion a West German chancellor has taken such action. His predecessor. Willy Brandt, resorted to this tactic in 1972 to bring about early elections.

Mr. Schmidt, who said publicly-aired differences over the government scheme had not helped the economy, expected the vote to strengthen his position as

LONDON STOCK MARKET

LONDON (R) - The market closed firm after a moderately active session, with the strength of sterling helping to overcome rises in U.S. prime rates to 161/2 per cent from 1534, dealers said. At 1500 GMT the F.T. index was up 8.8 to 579.8.

Government bonds ended with net rises ranging between 3/16 in short dates and 34 in longer maturities, having gained up to 78 earlier in the session. Virtually all sectors of the equity market showed gains, but a few were off the day's highs. Gold shares were narrowly higher and U.S. stocks were mixed, while Canadians held basically steady.

Barclays Bank closed 10p higher at 468p after news of a £100 -million unsecured capital loan stock due 2002/2007, payable in instalments of 25 sterling per cent on February 9 and 75 sterling per cent on April 30. The news cheered the market, which had been expecting a rights issue in this sector.

Other banks gained between 3p and 5p. Thorn EMI ended 15p up 473 while Beecham and Hawker were each 10p higher. GEC, ICL Blue Circle, Unilever, GKN, Glaxo and Grand Met rose between 4p and 8p.

Dropped catches by Australia make task easier for Windies

ADELAIDE (A.P.) - Victorious West Indies captain Clive Lloyd on Wednesday night praised his Australian opponents in defeat and said they would develop into an even more formidable test side within the next two years.

Lloyd was speaking after his side had snatched victory over Australia in the third test at Adelaide Oval, tying the series one-all and retaining the Sir Frank Worrell Trophy.

Lloyd said he had "a feeling" on his way to the ground on Wednesday morning that his side would be set a chase of 238 runs for victory and had told teammate Faoud Bacchus of the premonition.

As it happened Australia Wednesday lost six wickets for the addition of only 45 runs and the West Indies went to the crease beforelunch set a target of 236 for vic-

The Windies made it, helped by a not unlucky knock and poor fielding by the Australians.

But Lloyd did not have a bad word to say for his vanquished opponents.

Jamaican WBC champion to defend title

SEOUL, South Korea (A.P.) - A title match between World Boxing Council (WBC) super-lightweight champion Saoul Mamby of Jamaica and former champion Kim Sang-Hyun of South Korea has been set for April 11 in Pusan, Kim's handlers said Wednesday.

The match was approved by the WBC at its general meeting here last September, and both camps reached agreement on the date and place Tuesday, they said.

It was not disclosed, however, how much each fighter will receive for the bout at the southern coast port city. Mamby won the title from Kim with a 14th round knockout here in KANPUR. India (R) - India were poised to win the series after thwarting England's efforts to dismiss them cheaply on the fourth day of the sixth and final cricket test here Wednesday.

Steve Mahre emerges from Phil's shadow to win giant slalom

SCHLADMING, Austria (R) — American Steve Mahre Wednesday emerged from the shadow of his twin brother Phil when he snatched the men's giant slalom gold medal from Swedish titleholder Ingemar Stenmark at the world aloine ski championships. It was his first major giant slalom success and salvaged family honour after his brother, the World Cup holder and one of the favourites to win today's event, missed a gate less than 10 seconds into the first of the two runs. Steve Mahre's time for the two legs of two minutes 38.80 seconds gave him the gold medal by 0.51 seconds from Stenmark, who had to settle for silver. Boris Strel of Yugoslavia took the bronze with a flying second run, the fastest of the day, and a total time of 2:39.42. Joel Gaspoz of Switzerland was fourth.

"This is unbelievable and I don't understand what happened," Steve Mahre said. "Phil helped me a lot between the runs, keeping me loose and not letting me get nervous.

"But I don't really consider myself to be the best in the world. Everybody knows Phil and Ingemar are better along with a lot of others. I just hope I can continue like this in giant slaloms."

The secret of successful dummy play is to envision what might go wrong and then take steps to circumvent it. Note this hand.

There are two interesting aspects to the auction. First, North raised his partner's suit despite his balanced hand and stopper in each suit — to suppress such trump support would have been a crime, especially since the odds are that the opening two-bidder has an unbalanc-. ed hand. And observe that, despite the fact that he held all four aces, South started his Blackwood inquiry with a bid of four no trump-a jump to five no trump would have been the Grand Slam Force, inquiring about two of the three top honors.

West led the queen of hearts. When dummy comes down, the optimistic declarer sees that he can make a grand slam if East started with a singleton or doubleton king of spades. He wins the first trick in dummy and leads a spade to his queen. The finesse works, but when West fails to follow, declarer must, as the cards lie, lose two trump tricks for down

Fortunately, our declarer was a cautious man. He realized that only a 4-0 trump division could endanger his contract. To guard against that, he won the heart lead in his hand and led a low trump to the jack. His foresight was rewarded when West discarded a heart.

East captured the jack of spades with the king, but declarer was in control. By using two of his entries to the table to lead trumps toward his hand, his A-Q-8 of spades were just enough to neutralize East's 10-9-7. Thus, declarer was able to hold his trump losers to one.

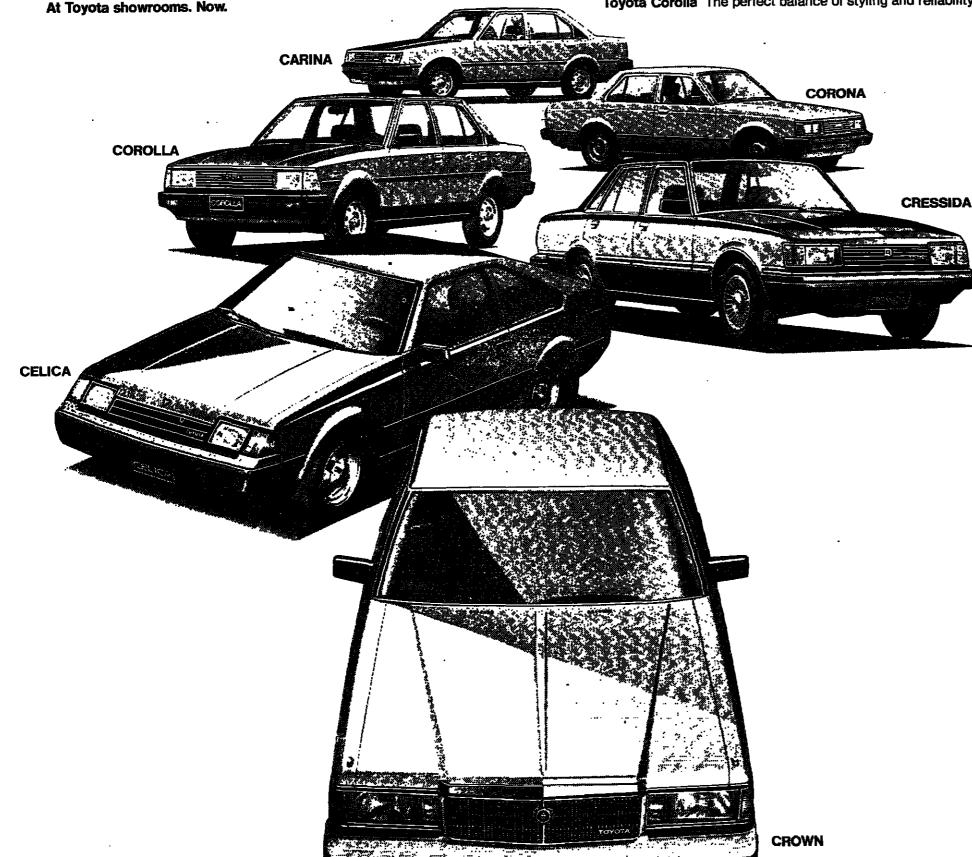

What if West started with all the missing trumps? He must play low when a trump is led to the jack and the jack will win the first trick. Now declarer can still make his contract if West's distribution is specifically 4-3-3-3. Declarer strips all the side suits from the hand and shortens his trump length by ruffing a heart. He then end plays West by leading a low trump, forcing a return from the king of trumps into his ace-queen.

Tips for customers at Indian restaurant

By Debra Weiner

SINGAPORE — "Long ago in India," Wadhu Sakhrani begins, "many centuries before Christ, recipes were the handiwork of doctors and priests -- seers so wise they knew whether life existed on Jupiter or Mars." Mr. Wadhu, the gray-haired, distinguishedlooking proprietor of Omar Khayyam, the only Indian restaurant in Singapore to serve the haute cuisine of Kashmir based on the aphrodisiac menus of the maharajas, pasues a moment, settling deep into his leopard-skin lounge

"But if nutrition was the original concern," he at last continues, "by the time the maharajas ruled, luxury was uppermost on the mind. And what," asks Mr. Wadhu, "is one of the greatest luxuries in the world, but women? More than one.

"Of course, to make love with 30 or 40 wives you need lots of energy. You need..." Mr. Wadhu pauses again as the silvery stirrings of sitar music weave through the air. "You need to be virile."

Like most Eastern cultures, India has long relied on herbal remedies for upsets and ailments. Thus when the maharajas sought to enhance their sensual pleasure, it was only natural, Mr. Wadhu explains, that they should solicit advice from their chefs. Which herbs, the Indian princes wanted to know, best combined with which ingredients, to simultaneously provide sexual strength and a cultured taste?

Until India's independence in 1947, these ambrosial recipes were kept royal secrets. Once the maharajas lost their places, however, many chefs were also left out of work. Eventually they revealed their formulas to the likes of Mr. Wadhu. "I have tried the various cuisines of the world, and I'm not ter even than the French." Fourteen years ago, Mr. Wadhu gave up his business in the rag trade to open his small, awardwinning restaurant opposite the U.S. Embassy on Hill Street here. He named it after the Persian poet-philosopher whose classic, The Robaiyat, expounds a philosophy of "Eat, drink and be

Trainees serve the Paris metro's 'O' line

A fictitious Paris underground line helps trainees

PARIS - A new subway line has been added to the 24 "metro" lines which serve Paris. It is the "O" line and the management of the Parisian transport system (RATP) was proud to present it to the press

It has 27 stations altogether. spread across districts of the capital which, until now, were not served by the existing network of the metro. The names of these stations are Piace des Vosges, Place de la Reunion, Colbert, les Rigollots, etc. Connections with other lines are made at La Motte-Piquet-Grenelle, Montparnasse...

In actual fact, this "O" line is a fictitious line, which exists only at the metro's training centre at Rue de Lagny, Paris. Unique in the world, its role is to train young drivers, both for the metropolitan network and for networks built abroad with the guidance of the RATP.

This simulator, named "Sosie" (meaning a double or replica) has become a necessity. With the installations becoming more and more complicated -- enabling the interval between two trains to be only 95 seconds at peak hours and carrying 4.5 million passengers per day -- this intense automation means that the former system of teaching drivers by giving them experience "on the job" is no longer good enough. The apprentices used to be put at the controls of a metro train with an experienced driver to survey them, so that they could gradually learn their job by experience: but, as soon as the slightest unexpected incident arose. the apprentice had to let the professional driver take over.

With the "Sosie" simulator, however, they are now able to test their reactions in all circumstances (the apparatus can envisage up to 150 different "incidents") without endangering the safety of the network, without upsetting the traffic or causing deterioration of the material. And when these apprentices make a "false manoeuvre", "Sosie" even lets them return to their starting point and make the manoeuvre again, this time the correct onc.

In this way, the RATP expects to complete the basic training of 150 pupils per year, as well as the periodic recycling of each of the present 1,150 subway rail officials at present employed in the network. (Each of them will undergo the recycling programme once every three years.) And it it important to add that the staff which operates the networks built abroad by the "SOFRETU" (a subsidiary of the RATP) will also be able to use the advantages of the simulator

"Up" means the Mogul Room, which, like the ground-floor cocktail lounge, is intimate and refined. Intricate Kashmiri walnut carvings. Bengali murals and wooden sculptures decorate the walls. The rhythm of the tabla drum accompanies dinner.

Although Omar Khayyam is frequented by many Singaporeans, the majority of guests tend to be Europeans. Even if they are unaware of the recipes' wanton nature, no customers, says Mr. Wadhu, can fail to notice the difference between his establishment and most other indian restaurants in Singapore. They feature sharp, peppery southern cooking, while the fare at Omar Khayyam is smooth, even subtle, and more in harcoconut milk as a base, but Mr. Wadhu's northern sauces are a blend of almonds, cashew nuts, yoghurt and melon seeds, among other ingredients. Instead of the strong, pungent South Indian spices, he prefers more delicate herbs - cardamom. saffron, nutmeg and mace - which in addition to being more costly, are good, according to Mr. Wadhu, at heating the body. Heat, needless to say, is invaluable for virility.

"All herbs are spices." Mr. Wadhu explains after ordering a sampling of his menu. Tandoori chicken; a mint chutney relish; Kashmiri nan, ovenbaked Indian bread seasoned with fresh coriander and spring onions; prawns marinated in honey and sour spices: a roasted lamb dish called 'Shah Nauz," which was fancied by the Maharaja of Jammu; and finally a favourite of the Mogul kings, diced chicken cooked in fruit juices and blended with saffron and other herbs. "But not all spices are herbs."

The differences? Both contribute flavour and aroma, but a herb also possesses medicinal properties.

With a stockpile of more than 80 herbs in his kitchen, Mr. Wadhu admits he is something of a fanatic. Turmeric, for instance, is added to so many Indian dishes

Brezhnev accuses Washington of apathy in disarmament talks

MOSCOW (R) - Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev accused the United States of dragging its feet at nuclear missile talks in Geneva and called for agreement on a two-thirds reduction in medium-range atomic weaponry

The Soviet leader, who was Wednesday talking to representatives of the Socialist Intemational, also firmly rejected President Reagan's notion of "linkage" in Soviet-American relations, according to the official news agency TASS.

Mr. Brezhnev said Moscow viewed patient and constructive talks aimed at real reductions in East-West arms levels as the only way to solve current world ten-

He suggested that the United States had displayed a different attitude at the Geneva talks.

"The initial stage of these talks gives rise to a certain wariness because of the obvious reluctance of the American side to look for a basis of a mutually acceptable agreement," the Soviet leader said.

The Geneva negotiations. which started in November, aim at limiting deployment of mediumrange missiles in Europe. The United States is calling on Moscow to remove its triple-warhead SS-20 missiles and plans to deploy nearly 600 Cruise and Pershing-2 missiles of its own from next year if the talks reach no agreement.

Both sides agreed to strict secrecy at the start of the negotiations. Mr. Brezhnev's remarks Wednesday, indicating Soviet impatience with their progress, was the first substantial comment on them from either Washington or Moscow.

The Soviet president renewed earlier calls for a moratorium on further missile deployment and for an agreement reducing current missile stocks by hundreds of units.

But for the first time he outlined in public a possible timetable for third or even less," he said. The president said the two sides could agree to a stage-by-stage reduction that would mean "cutting the arsenals of both in the next few years by approximately one-third and then going further

Western diplomats said the proposal of a two-thirds cut had already been made in private by Soviet officials in talks with U.S.

They said Mr. Brezhnev's comments did not contain any substantially new proposals because he based his calls for sharp reductions in arms on the premise that there was a balance of power between East and West.

The Soviet Union says that both sides have about 1,000 mediumτange nuclear missile carriers. It includes British and French missiles and U.S. forward-based systems in its calculations. The U.S. side rejects this argument and says a build-up of more than 150 SS-20 missiles over the past few years has given Moscow a major advantage and left the West dangerously exposed. The Soviet president rejected outright Mr. Reagan's demands that arms questions be linked with Moscow's behaviour generally in foreign affairs and that the Kremlin agree to show restraint in its dealings with Third World states.

Diplomacy requires 'denouements' and not 'linkages'," he was quoted as saying.

"The tangled knot of conflict situations and disputed problems in the world cannot be cut by any sword. The only way is the way of patient constructive talks, ensuring a real reduction and destruction of arms," he added. Mr. Brezhnev's remarks came at a meeting with leaders of the Socialist International's council on disarmament at the Kremlin. The group included Kalevi Sorsa, chairman of Finland's Social Democratic Party, and Walter Hacker, a senior official in the Austrian Socialist Party.

The Socialist International. which groups more than 50 Socialist and Social Democrat parties. has been trying to find ways of facilitating East-West agreements on arms cuts.

Mr. Brezhnev said Moscow was still keen to draw up with the U.S. a general statement of principles outlining the aims of the two sides in trying to cut nuclear arms in Ешторе.

"We continue to hope for a pos-itive reaction from the USA." he added.

The Soviet leader also complained about Washington's attitude towards talks on a new agreement on intercontinental nuclear missiles. The U.S. administration states

Bush welcomes Dozier home

WASHINGTON (A.P.) - U.S. Vice-President George Bush welcomed Brig. Gen. James Dozier back to the United States Wednesday and said, "I can't imagine a happier job."

Mr. Bush, in remarks prepared for Gen. Dozier's arrival at Andrews Air Force Base, said the general's safe return after being held for 42 days by the Red Brigades was "a sign of hope and encouragement for a decade that in just two years has already witnessed enough terrorism to last

The vice president also saluted Lt. Col. Charles Ray, shot on a Paris street two weeks ago in a terrorist attack.

"He was not as lucky as Gen. Dozier and all we could do then was watch his coffin come off the plane," Mr. Bush said.

Mr. Bush also praised the Italian security forces who rescued Gen. Dozier and said "molto grazie (thanks a lot)".

Mr. Bush, calling attention to the music that the general's captors listened to and to Gen. Dozier's battle decorations, said: "If there were a ribbon for being made to listen to rock music 12 bours a day -- what a horrible torture - he'd have won that too."

Hijacked jetliner back in Florida

MIAMI (R) - An Air Florida plane forced to fly to Cuba Tuesday by a lone hijacker returned safely to Florida later in the day.

Air Florida Chairman Eli Timoner told reporters the hijacker. described by passengers as a young Latin male, has threatened the crew with a bottle he claimed contained inflammable liquid during a flight from Miami to Key

"He wanted to go to Havana and we accommodated him," Mr. Timoner said. He said that after the Air Florida Boeing 737 landed at Havana airport, the hijacker released the 71 passengers and five crew and surrendered to authorities. The airliner stayed on the ground in Havana for two and a half hours while passengers and crew were served refreshments in the airport terminal. It then returned to Florida. It was the first hijacking of a U.S. airliner to Cuba since an Eastern Airlines L-1011 was forced to Havana in July last year by two men carrying petrol bombs. The previous summer there had been a rash of hijackings by homesick Cuban refugees disenchanted with the United States after arriving in May, 1980, on "freedom flottilas" from Cuba.

Burmese government, but international narcotics officials maintained he was involved in a multimillion dollar smuggling operation. The Golden Triangle, where the borders of Thailand, Burma and Laos converge, is a major source of opium, from which heroin is refined. Mr. Prachuab confirmed that the government would not negotiate with Mr. Khun Sa himself because a warrant for his arrest had been issued last year and a reward of $22,000 offered.

Meanwhile, border patrol police in Chiang Rai said that about 100 of Mr. Khun Sa's men attacked a hilltribe village Monday night, plundering food supplies and setting fire to four huts.
